Who Can Participate?

The Summit is open to accredited MIP London participants involved in or exploring opportunities in:

- Micro drama & short-form scripted content
- Vertical video formats
- Production, distribution, financing & IP development
- Digital platforms & monetization strategies
- Technology, AI and tools for short-form storytelling
- Brand entertainment and content-driven marketers

Session Format

The Summit is structured around 10 themed roundtables (10x10 format) to encourage focused, high-value dialogue.

The session opens with a data-driven industry snapshot, setting the context with key market insights and trends. This is followed by expert-led roundtable conversations, each hosted by a handpicked Table Leader.

When accredited participants sign up through the application form, they will indicate their preferred table, and assignments are made to best match their interests and objectives.

Table Leaders may share the Summit registration link with selected members of their network (clients, partners or strategic contacts they wish to invite).

Invited participants must be accredited to MIP LONDON to sign-up, unless an exception is granted upon request.

Role of the Table Leaders

Table Leaders are responsible for facilitating high-quality, strategic discussions. This role includes:

- Presenting their activity, expertise and positioning in the micro drama and vertical content ecosystem
- Sharing projects, case studies and practical market insights
- Offering a strategic vision on the future of micro drama and short-form vertical storytelling

This is not a pitching session. The format is designed to be informative, educational and peer-driven, with the clear objective of connecting the right professionals to enable deal-making, partnerships and long-term collaboration.
